Terry Kucera, Solar Physicist, Bicycles to Work at Goddard

by Mary Moien

The lights dimmed. The members of the Greenbelt Astronomical Society settled back to hear a presentation on “STEREO.” Dr. Terry Kucera, solar astronomer and physicist, handed out 3-D glasses. Yes, she indicated, some of the slides will be in 3-D. From the enthusiasm in her voice as she discussed the mission and answered the many questions, it was obvious that it was a topic that she loved and was happy to share with others.

Greenbelt resident Terry Kucera is an internationally-known solar physicist and is the deputy project scientist for solar spacecraft missions with NASA at Goddard Space Flight Center. STEREO, her current major mission, stands for Solar Territorial Relations Observatory. The mission involves two space-based observatories that were launched in 2006 and are in orbit around the sun in such a way that the pictures they send of the sun from space can form a three-dimensional view for scientists to use in their research. Contrary to what non-scientists might think, Kucera commented that she spends much of her day in front of a computer, not with a telescope scanning the skies.

While working on a different mission – SOHO – Kucera was part of a panel discussion on National Public Radio’s Science Friday. “New Explorations of the Solar System” was the topic and she discussed her mission – SOHO – the Solar and Heliospheric Observatory. With both missions she was involved with prelaunch activities. Now that all spacecraft are operational, she can concentrate on studying the pictures and data that are being transmitted back to earth.

She has had a chance to work with scientists from a number of countries and has visited Japan as well as several European countries to work on space projects. Kucera described her most recent trip. “The last place I went was Bern, Switzerland. That’s the former home of Albert Einstein, so like a good bunch of physicists, most of us trooped out to see his old apartment which is now a museum.”

Kucera is involved with Solar Week (<http://solarweek.org/>), which is a group effort to encourage students, especially middle-school students and especially girls, to get interested in science. On the site are brief biographies of a number of scientists including Kucera. The next Solar Week is March 17 through 21 and students and teachers can participate interactively through the website. Topics include the sun as a star, solar close-ups and

by Thomas X. White

In a sort of “calm before the storm” atmosphere, the Greenbelt City Council went quickly through a fairly light agenda at its regular meeting on Monday, February 25. Most of the meeting time of just over an hour and a half was about equally divided between three topics: a visit from Verizon FiOS representatives with an update on construction of their fiber optic system in Greenbelt East neighborhoods, state and county legislation and administrative reports from individual councilmembers and the city manager on activities since the last meeting. (Councilmember Konrad Herling, recovering from minor surgery, was unable to attend the meeting.)

With hardly any discussion, council quickly disposed of two items of business on the formal agenda. The first was unanimous approval of a resolution authorizing acceptance of bond bill funds amounting to $300,000 from the state legislature toward renovation of the historic Old Greenbelt Theatre. A provision of the bond bill requires that the city grant the Maryland Historical Trust a perpetual easement on the theater building before the city becomes eligible to receive the grant funds. Approval of the resolution allows the city staff to work with the trust in drafting an easement agreement for later council review.

City Manager Michael McLaughlin explained this scenario has been followed successfully with previous state-supported grant funding for renovations for such Greenbelt facilities as the Community Center and the Mother and Child statue in Roosevelt Center.

Also dispensed with quickly was a staff recommendation that

by Vicki Kriz

NBA All-Stars were not the only ones showing off their jumping skills at the February National Basketball Association All-Star Game in New Orleans: Greenbelt’s very own Sity Stars jump rope team also performed as a part of the festivities.

The team performed at the NBA All-Star Game Jam Session, a new addition to the All-Star Game events that promotes the involvement of kids with a variety of kid-oriented performances, challenges and appearances by current and retired NBA players. From February 14 to 17, four of the Greenbelt Sity Stars entertained crowds with jump rope routines.

The team was invited to perform as part of a booth sponsored by Toyota with the theme of community activism and the involvement of youth.

“I was really excited,” Kim Bradshaw, head coach of the Sity Stars, said about hearing of the invitation. The team performed two to three times a day at the Jam Session, receiving a very enthusiastic response from their audience.

Regyn Davis-Young, 11, and Bailey Woodruff, 9, two of the four jumpers who performed in New Orleans, said they were nervous about being in front of the crowd. However, another jumper, Jordon Payne, 12, said he was not worried. “I like being in front of people,” he said.

“I think they did well,” Bradshaw said. “As a coach, you always want better but the crowd loved them.”

Although their performance at the All-Star game was quite an opportunity for the Sity Stars, Bradshaw notes the performance of a few of her jumpers in the 2007 Disney Channel original movie “Jump In!” as the team’s biggest accomplishment.

The Greenbelt Sity Stars, formerly the Greenbelt Youth Double Dutch League, was founded in 1991 by Austin Gibbs. Bradshaw has been head coach of the Sity Stars since Gibbs invited her to coach the team after seeing her perform.

Jumping since she was 10 years old, Bradshaw, the 2006

3-Day Event Commemorates Heritage of the New Deal

by Sandra Lange

“America’s New Deal Heritage” is the theme for the 75th commemoration of the New Deal accomplishments of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt’s administration. Under that title the Library of Congress (LOC) and the National New Deal Preservation Association (NNDPA) are co-sponsoring a three-day event March 12 to 14 to celebrate a historical period that transformed our country following the Great Depression in the early 1930s when less than half the workforce was employed full-time.

President Roosevelt’s New Deal programs in 1933 created the economic stimulus that focused on jobs and the nation’s infrastructure. It began with a three-month-long special congressional session known as the “Hundred Days.” Legislation passed during this time addressed plummeting agricultural prices, chaos in the banking and financial industries, mortgage foreclosures, and unemployment.

The latter brought forth the famous New Deal programs of the Civilian Conservation Corps, the National Recovery Administration and the Public Works Administration. The resulting public institutions – schools, libraries, post offices, parks, murals and public art – are a lasting legacy of the New Deal.

Later, a second spate of legislation brought forth union protection programs, the Social Security Act and programs to aid tenant farmers and migrant workers. Although the goal of the New Deal was to use the power of the federal government to lift the country out of the Depression, the long-term effect was to set a precedent for Washington’s involvement in the economic and social affairs of the nation.

Greenbelt is one of three “greentowns” constructed by FDR’s New Deal administration. The building of Greenbelt served to create jobs for thousands of unemployed workers and provided much-needed housing for low- and moderate-income families. The 1,600 homes that comprise Greenbelt Homes, Inc., as well as the walkways, underpasses, Roosevelt Center and the Community Center, are all a living legacy of the New Deal.

On Wednesday, March 12 the NNDPA is sponsoring a bus tour which will begin in Washington, D.C., with a stop at the Department of the Interior to view New Deal murals and the FDR Memorial; the tour will then proceed to Beltsville for a historical overview of the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center. The trip will end in Greenbelt for tours of the Greenbelt Museum and its surroundings.

There is a fee for the tour and catered lunch. For more information contact NNDPA board member Dr. Robert Leighninger at rleighn@asu.edu or call 301-345-2870.

New Deal Workshop

The second part of the celebration takes place at the Library of Congress. On Thursday, March 13 from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., NNDPA will sponsor a workshop on “The New Deal Living Legacy at 75.” Registration is available online at the NNDPA website.

On the afternoon of March 13 the LOC will host a series of workshops on the unique, primary documentation created by New Deal programs. LOC staff will discuss and display a selection

Many Thank Yous!

Thank you so much to the wonderful lady who adopted my cat Tilly. I appreciated the open letter you wrote about your great experience adopting her from the Greenbelt Animal Shelter.

I am so happy about the outcome for Tilly – to know she is in good hands with a loving person who will give her lots of love for the rest of her life. I had adopted her from my daughter but it was not working out with my two male cats and Tilly.

After the death of my husband I decided with a heavy heart to take her to the Greenbelt Animal Shelter. I was very nervous because I have never taken any pets there before but I was met with kind faces and was assured by Patti that if I changed my mind I could come back to take Tilly home. I almost did but stuck it out hoping for the best. It was all worth it from your kind letter.

You were the answer to Tilly’s and my prayers. It was like she was waiting for you. As you can tell by her sweetness, she is a good lap cat and a good listener. Many thank yous from her previous owner.

You are her angel.

Peggy Byrd

THANKS!

Thanks to all of you who attended the dance on Friday, February 29 and for your generous contributions of $187. We gave $100 to the Sons of the Legion, $45 to the USO and purchased a nice vase of roses and mixed flowers for Patti Ladnier, who is recovering from a long illness. She thanks you for your thoughts as well. Greenbelt is Great! The Good Guys, Donald, Rock, Rick and Pat.

Gospel and Kirtan Fused In Palm Sunday Concert

by Kim Kash

A special Palm Sunday event will unite East and West in music and multi-denominational praise this year with the Greenbelt Om Community Yoga production of World Beat Praise Jam at the Greenbelt Community Church on March 16 at 7 p.m.

Groovananda, a band led by Washington, D.C. worldbeat musician Wynne Paris, will perform a fusion of gospel and kirtan (a yogic musical form that features call and response chanting between band and audience). Paris and the concert’s organizers from Greenbelt Om and Metro DC Kirtan are fascinated by the similarities in the call-and-response styles of gospel and kirtan music. They feel called to create a performance that highlights the connection between these two styles of music that originated in faith on points opposite to one another on the globe.

Paris has been a proponent of kirtan and yoga music for the last decade, recording and performing with genre-defining artists like Krishna Das and Dave Stringer as well as with spiritually minded rock musicians including Rick Allen (Def Leppard), Mark Karan (Ratdog), JT Thomas (Bruce Hornsby band) and Jim Donovan (Rusted Root). Paris has two CD recordings out, available on iTunes and CDbaby and is getting ready to release his third recording as Groovananda. Musically, Groovananda’s influences range from jazz and Americana to East Indian/World.

Joining Paris on stage at the World Beat Praise Jam will be Wammie-nominated keyboard player Dan Reynolds who has been a mainstay of the Washington, D.C. jazz community. Other instrumentalists and singers will include Bill Jenkins and Nirvan Sengupta on tablas (Indian percussion).

For more information, visit www.greenbeltom.com and www.wynneparis.com. Admission is by donation.

Williams-Forson, assistant professor of American Studies at the University of Maryland in College Park, on Tuesday, March 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the Greenbelt Community Center in Room 201. Her lecture will focus particularly on African American women and food preparation during the 20th century.

This program is part of the Greenbelt Museum's ongoing bi-monthly lecture series. All lectures are free and open to the public.

Reel and Meal At the New Deal

There is no charge for admission. Beginning at 6:30 p.m. an optional vegan buffet meal will be offered to help raise funds for the Café.

This 77-minute film explores the interconnected life journeys of farmed animals, former farmers and animal rescuers struggling against an out of control industrial system. Seeing the film will help viewers understand why only vegan food is served at Reel and Meal events. Peaceable Kingdom is especially relevant in light of the recent largest recall of beef in the country's history, a recall stemming from violent treatment by slaughter house workers forcing "downed" cattle to stand for slaughter.

There will be a discussion following the film. Email Steve Kane at sr.kane@verizon.net for more information.

GIVE THANKS

Every breath that we breathe is a blessing from God and we learn from the Prophet Solomon (peace be upon him) to recognize these blessings each day. The Holy Qur'an tells us how he never forgot to be thankful to God. He is quoted to have said, "This is by the grace of my Lord, to test me whether I am grateful or ungrateful! And if any is grateful, it is (a gain) for his own soul; but if any is ungrateful, truly my Lord is free of all needs, supreme in honor."
— The Holy Qur'an, 27:40

Count your blessings every day. For more information about gratefulness from an Islamic perspective, call 301-982-9463 or email info@searchislam.org or visit www.searchislam.org.

Grand National Jump Rope Champion, sees the sport of jump rope as not only a great way to build good health practices but also as a unique way to build confidence and inspire dedication.

According to the team's website, the "goal is to offer a positive activity that teaches and develops rope jumping skills while promoting fitness, teamwork, building self-esteem, developing confidence and leadership skills, encouraging good sportsmanship while helping to advance the sport of Jump Rope."

"It's a good feeling to bring my love for the sport to the kids," Bradshaw said. She currently coaches 40 jumpers ranging from 6 to 50 years old.

The team attends at least five competitions a year; however, this is sometimes limited due to costly fees of entering and traveling to and from competitions. Bradshaw plans to send qualifying jumpers to the regional tournament in Dumfries, Va., in April and the National Jump Rope Championships in Orlando, Fla., in June.

Jumpers compete in several styles of jump rope, including double-dutch, single-rope free-style and routines as well as speed jumping.

After 17 years of coaching the Stars, Bradshaw may retire from coaching in three years so she can lend her support to her two sons, ages 7 and 12, who are becoming more interested in other sports as they get older.

Those interested in becoming one of the Greenbelt Sity Stars should visit the team's website: www.greenbeltsitystars.com.

of materials from their New Deal holdings including rare collections and under-utilized treasures.

Complementing the LOC programs on March 13 will be a panel discussion, "Electing FDR: The New Deal Campaign of 1932," at 7 p.m. at the National Archives and Records Administration in College Park.

On Friday, March 14 the LOC is sponsoring a free all-day symposium, "Art, Culture and Government." Scholars from around the country will present recent research on New Deal materials, primarily case studies that focus on the legacy of New Deal programs and its impact on American culture today. Registration is available on line on a first-come, first-served basis, at www.loc.gov/folklife/newdeal/index.html.

On Saturday, March 15 the National Archives in College Park is hosting a day-long free festival of films, "For a Better America: The New Deal on Film." Rare government-produced period documentary films catalog the thinking that went into many of the New Deal programs. Renowned filmmakers such as Pare Lorentz are featured. The Archives website at www.archives.gov/nae/news contains a list of films and times for showings.

"Many of the important public buildings constructed 75 years ago by the Public Works Administration are still being used today," commented Dr. Leighninger. "We need to remind people of the contributions of the New Deal and put public works back on the national agenda."

"We have reaped the benefits of the New Deal for 75 years," he added.

In celebrating the New Deal, the LOC points to the hallmarks of FDR's first 100 days in office – innovation, compassion, empowerment and the courage to change. "This nation asks for action," said FDR, "and action now. Our greatest primary task is to put people to work."

On the site Kucera describes how she became interested in space when she was 8 years old and can remember when the spacecraft Voyager passed Jupiter when she was in high school. She completed her undergraduate degree in physics at Carleton College in Northfield, Minn. Kucera obtained her Ph.D. in Astrophysical, Planetary and Atmospheric Sciences from the University of Colorado at Boulder.

"My actual thesis was centered on radio observations of solar flares. I was using data from ground-based radio telescopes like the Very Large Array in New Mexico. One of the reasons I decided to go into solar physics rather than 'night-time' astronomy was so I would not have to stay up all night observing!" It was while she was in school in Boulder that she took up bicycling.

Kucera, who lives in the historic part of Greenbelt, came to Goddard and the city in 1993 – almost 15 years ago. A friend who worked at Goddard told her she could bicycle to work if she lived in the city and that was all she needed to know. She can be found pedaling through town and down Greenbelt Road to Goddard most days. She met Jeff Travis, now her husband, in the Greenbelt Bicycle Coalition. He is an engineer, also at Goddard. Kucera finds time to practice her mandolin and volunteers at the New Deal Café. She likes to read and is happy she lives close to the library. Kucera enjoys cooking and is looking forward to the possibility of a farmers' market in Roosevelt Center this summer.
